Insulation

Solid Wall
Insulation

Renewable
Heating

Minimum Energy Efficiency Standards (MEES)

Where private rental properties are currently rated below 'E' on an Energy Performance Certificate, landlords will need to improve the thermal efficiency of their domestic properties to the required standard. Not only is this a legal requirement in itself, it's important security for landlords. By installing energy efficiency measures you are helping to lower your tenant's energy bills, making your property an attractive rental to potential occupants. For further advice search MEES via www.gov.uk

Grant funding

Eligibility is dependent on:

1. The current energy efficiency rating of your domestic property: your property must have an Energy Performance Certificate rating of E, F or G.

Visit www.find-energy-certificate.digital.communities.gov.uk to check your property EPC rating.

2. Tenant household income should be less than £30,000 per year or a member of the household being in receipt of an eligible benefit.

3. Funding is available for private landlords, local authority owned properties and social housing. Maximum funding per property is £5,000 with a 33% installation cost contribution required from the landlord.

*Grant funding is calculated using Ofgem deemed savings scores. Grant funding will differ between property types, property size, fuel types and installation. Privately rented homes are subject to variation in qualifying criteria. The offer and any grant funding is subject to property assessment and qualifying criteria.
